Introduction

About the Author

My name is Kenneth R Marks, and I reside in Arizona. This is the story of how I began the journey of finding my family history. In 2002, for a reason long forgotten, I joined ancestry.com as a "free subscriber." Not driven by a passion to "know" my roots, but just interested, I began the search.

When I started, knew the first and last names of only two of my great grandparents – both on my mother's side of the family. I did remember Grandpa Heyman, my father's grandfather, but didn't know his first name. All five of my remaining great grandparents were a total mystery to me. In fact, I have no memory of anyone in my family even mentioning them – not because they led "bad" lives or had a sordid history – just because no one talked of them.

My dear mother passed away in July 2003. After her passing, I became more interested. You might ask "Did you ask your mother about any family history between 2002 and the date of her passing?" And the answer is NO! Don't make the same mistake I did; ask the living before it is too late. Ask about their lives and their stories. And don't just look at their photo books, ask them about the people who are in these albums. And make sure that you write down the names and locations of the photos.

Since that time, I have become an obsessed Ancestor Hunter. The Ancestor Hunt website was created about a decade ago to "help people find stuff." In a nutshell, we at the Ancestor Hunt find links to Free Online Collections, so that you can use them to begin your hunt for your own ancestors. What started as 10,000 links to Free Online Newspaper Titles in 2014 has blossomed into over 210,000 links to Free Collections in 25 different Genealogy Record Collection categories. In addition, we also write about tools and techniques that we have discovered over the years that are extremely helpful in genealogy research. To access The Ancestor Hunt website, go to TheAncestorHunt.com.

This is one of my favorite ancestor photos (also on the book cover), taken about 120 years ago in Schubin, Germany. Six of the children emigrated to America, and sadly the boy in the middle perished in the Holocaust, along with his brother and niece (not shown).

Getting Started

Most current genealogy researchers, when starting their quest to find their ancestors and begin filling out their family tree, start their research by searching online. There are thousands of websites that contain genealogy related collections of records that can be helpful in that quest.

Everyone who has a television has seen commercials promising to help subscribers find records that help determine who should be in that family tree. However, not everyone has the means to subscribe to websites that offer genealogy databases for a price.

The goal of this book is to provide you with the major online databases, libraries, archives, and websites that are free to use.

This information is presented in three parts.

- Section 1 discusses nationwide United States databases, archives, and libraries.
- Section 2 presents the 50 to 80 largest and most diverse websites in each of the 50 states.
- Section 3, the Appendix, contains techniques for using some of the websites mentioned in this book.

I wish you great success and satisfaction in your journey through history—learning more about your personal ancestry and genealogy.

— Kenneth R Marks

The History of Free

Genealogy started out free. I remember years ago writing letters and mailing them to possible relatives. Microfilming of pertinent genealogical records started in the 1930s. You had to travel to where the microfilm reader was located to be able to read what was stored on the film. Copy machines came a little later, so wherever you found an original record, you might have been able to obtain a copy of the record for a small fee. Even today, libraries will perform research for you and mail you a copy of the record for a small fee.

In the 1990s, everything changed. FamilySearch began providing scanned records, indexes were painstakingly created, Ancestry.com began, and the modern era of genealogy research was launched.

Not All Records are Online

Even though we can perform a great deal of research online, it is important to realize that all records have not been microfilmed or digitized, and hence are not available from a computer or smartphone via the Internet. Remember that just because a set of records has been microfilmed does not mean it has been digitized. Furthermore, there may be legal reasons why the collection has not been made available online. Copyright issues and ownership reasons prevent access. Embargoes exist because of the sensitivity of the information, such as death records that contain Social Security numbers or certain hospital records with personal information.

The main reason for the lack of online availability is funding. It is expensive to microfilm, scan, and digitize the records that we seek. Some experts maintain that only 10% of all genealogy related records are online. My opinion would be just a guess. The fact is that we can't see what we don't know. Have you ever made your way through dozens of file cabinets or boxes in a court storage room? How about all the paper files that many libraries have stored away from public access? Not to mention the piles and piles of newspapers that are hidden away in long-term storage.

Free Access to Subscription Databases

Subscription website databases, such as Ancestry, MyHeritage, Newspapers, and others generally have a free trial for a short time. Many have free weekends based around a certain holiday, such as free online military records over Memorial Day weekend, or free marriage records around Valentine's Day. You can get free access that way. Years ago, I stored up my newspaper searches for a while and then used a one-week free trial and searched crazily for a week. It can be done.

Another way to get free access is via your local library. Many libraries have at least an Ancestry subscription and a subscription to one or more of the online newspaper databases. You may need to leave your house to visit a library in your area to obtain access. And depending on the type of subscription, some libraries can provide access for you while you are at home with your library card.

Furthermore, some of the subscription sites, like Ancestry, MyHeritage, and Fold3 have free collections that are accessible without a subscription. These are a small subset of all of their collections, but they are worth reviewing and researching.

This book discusses free online access to genealogy websites and databases, and will show you where you should perform much of your genealogy research… for free.

Access to Free Collections for Residents

Another class of free access to genealogy resources is for patrons of a library with a library card. Some libraries require you to be physically in the library to access certain collections that do not require a subscription. This is especially the case for some newspaper databases. And some statewide newspaper collections, such as those in Wisconsin and Vermont, require proof of residency to obtain access.

Why Isn't Genealogy Always Free?

Let's face it – we all have been spoiled by the fact that FamilySearch is free. This includes free collections and records to search and browse-only collections that don't have an index but have been scanned. All free!

The simple truth is that genealogy records are free, by and large. You just need to travel to the source to see it and possibly get a copy of it. With some restrictions, most records are free. Sure, birth and death records usually need to stew for several decades before you can access them if you are not a direct, close relative.

But why aren't the records on Ancestry or MyHeritage free? After all, much of their database is full of records that are in the public domain. It's simple; these commercial companies invest millions of dollars in hardware and communications equipment to index, filter, and provide these records to you.

Personally, I have subscriptions to most large genealogy sites, including newspaper sites. Why? Because using these sites and their collections advances my personal genealogy research the fastest way possible.

But there are free resources online. Billions of records, indexes, websites, online archives. etc. One of The Ancestor Hunt's most important goals is to provide links to these free resources. Hence, this book.

Section 1:

Nationwide Websites

Aggregation Sites

Introduction

An aggregation site, for the purpose of this book, is a site that has multiple genealogical categories for multiple locations. It also is a site that does not just provide links to genealogy collections that are online and free. It includes source material that is useful to researchers. By and large, the information on the site is derived.

The collections on an aggregation site may have scanned images, transcribed documents, as well as indexes to where the documents themselves may reside.

Transcribed documents are generally provided by volunteers or members of the organization that provides the website.

Unfortunately, much of the information that you may find on an aggregation site does not have the source of the material cited properly. Some material is not cited at all, some poorly, and some with enough detail to find the actual source. This is unfortunate.

Yet, aggregation sites can provide clues that can certainly guide the researcher to evidence to fill out their family tree with the accurate residents.

All trademarks are the property of their respective owners and used here for educational purposes.

Access Genealogy

Access Genealogy is an aggregation site, which means that it has a number of genealogy categories for all of the United States. Its primary feature is links to other collections on other websites. Most of these are free, but there are multiple links to subscription databases, such as Ancestry. It started in 1999.

From their website: "AccessGenealogy.com contains the largest collection of free genealogy for your United States research. Find hundreds of thousands of free websites with billions of names you can use to further your family genealogy! Specifically, we provide sources for birth records, death records, marriage records, census records, tax records, church records, court records, military records, historical newspapers, cemeteries, and ethnic records. We also provide some historical details about different times and people in America's history. Our specialty, however, is Native American genealogy and research. You can always access our Native American collection of material, by using the link at the top of every page. Access Genealogy directs researchers to free United States genealogy resources online. We do this in two methods, by categorizing your search (links in the menu at the top of every page) or by enabling you to search by locality (links on the right of every page under the US Genealogy heading)"

I have found this site to be useful from time to time. It combines a large link collection with various transcribed records, collections, and documents.

To access the site, go to AccessGenealogy.com

American History & Genealogy Project

The American History & Genealogy Project (AHGP) is very similar to the USGenWeb and Genealogy Trails sites. Essentially, it is a collection of independent, state-based websites with a multitude of information in several genealogical categories.

From the website: "Welcome to the Home of the American History and Genealogy Project (AHGP), an unincorporated network of independent Web Sites devoted to History and Genealogy and covering North American Countries and Territories. Anyone with a genealogy, history or related project or topic sites are welcome to join."

The site also has several special projects. Here is a subset of them:

- AHGP Census Project
- AHGP Cemetery Project
- AHGP's Civil War Project
- AHGP's Native American Project
- AHGP's Obituary Resource Center
- AHGP's Family Group Sheet Project
- Military Forts by State
- Gazetteers, Directories, Post Offices, and More

Like other aggregation sites, this site should be visited for your state of interest and genealogy category. There may be something on this site that is unique and useful in your own research.

To access the site, go to www.AHGP.org

FamilySearch

FamilySearch was founded in 1894 as the Genealogical Society of Utah. It is without question, the most useful website for genealogy research on the planet, and it is totally free.

In 1999, the FamilySearch website was launched. In 2020, it had over 400,000 visitors per day. Probably its most well-known feature is the ability for users to search for records online. There are over 2 billion records and 1 billion images to search through. The records have been indexed by thousands of volunteers. Currently there are 3,165 record collections to search.

Start a search via the Search Historical Records page, which can be found at: www.FamilySearch.org/search. On that page you can start a basic search which includes a first name, last name, a place, and a year.

A more advanced search is enabled by clicking on the More Options link, which displays a page that allows for the entry of an Alternate Name, the person's sex, and the following additional options:

- Life Event: such as Birth, Marriage, Residence, or Death and the year range and place of the event
- Family Member Names: such as Spouse, Mother, Father, or Other Person
- Record Options: including Location, Type, Batch Number, and Image Group Number

The results are then displayed and can be further dissected by adding more detailed criteria.

FamilySearch Catalog

The FamilySearch Catalog can be thought of as the Browsable Collections finder. It searches all the collections that are available throughout the FamilySearch universe. Collections that have been microfilmed can be discovered. Collections that have been digitized but are only available at a Family History Center facility are listed. Collections that have been digitized and that can be browsed from anywhere can be listed and then displayed one image at a time. In total, the catalog includes books, online materials, microfilm, microfiche, and publications.

I personally think of the Catalog as the means for me to view collections via my own microfilm machine, only via a computer. In my opinion, the Catalog is the most useful undiscovered part of the FamilySearch sets of collections.

To access the site, go to: www.FamilySearch.org/search/catalog

Once there, a user can enter a combination of Place, Surnames, Titles, Author, Subjects, and Keywords and then browse through the results to choose which ones to view or research further.

There are some tricks to getting the most out of a Catalog search. I encourage you to read this article in the Appendix of this book: Two Hidden Secrets for the FamilySearch Catalog.

FamilySearch Digital Library

The FamilySearch Digital Library essentially is the place for books. FamilySearch identifies it in a more detailed fashion: "Over 500,000 genealogy books, family histories, maps, yearbooks, and more."

Partner libraries have shared parts of their collections with FamilySearch. They are major libraries in the U.S., Canada, and Europe. You can search the Digital Library by entering a combination (or just one) of Keyword, Title, Subject, and/or Author.

Search results are displayed. There are two types of results as to viewing the digitized book or document. If the publication is protected (generally because of copyright restrictions), then you cannot view the publication online and are only shown a snippet. The other option is that you can view the entire publication, at which time you can browse through it page-by-page as you desire. It operates much like the Google Books website.

To access the site, go to www.FamilySearch.org/library/books

FamilySearch Wiki

The Wiki is amazing. It has over 100,000 articles and essentially is as the website states: "Find the birth, death, marriage, census records, and other genealogy resources for your ancestor."

The Wiki is a guide to finding where to look for a specific location or genealogy resource category. There likely is an article that will help you find a collection somewhere to browse through or search.

It also is a wonderful educational tool. Here's an example. Let's say you want to find some death information about an ancestor who died in Clarke County, Alabama in 1904. If you go to the Wiki article about that county, you will discover that the state didn't start requiring death registrations until 1908, and even at that, general compliance was not accomplished until 1925. As you can see, for this example, looking for a death record at the state level is a waste of your time.

The Wiki is full of information like this example. It has thousands of links to collections, records, books, and other information that will help you in your genealogy journey.

To access the site, go to www.FamilySearch.org/en/wiki/Main_Page

Genealogy Trails

Genealogy Trails is a set of websites that present transcribed genealogy records and collections for the United States. Each state has its own website, and there are subsites for each county in the state. It is a totally volunteer-based organization.

Their principles are (from their website): "In forming the Genealogy Trails Project, it was decided that all affiliated County Hosts have complete control over their respective pages. In this respect, all have agreed to abide by a few principles based on Common Sense and Good Manners. We welcome anyone wishing to adopt one of the counties not yet hosted, and only expect them to follow these simple guidelines also.

- Provide free on-line history and genealogy material.
- Non-commercial use of these pages.
- Update pages and material as often as possible.
- No obscene or pornographic content of any kind.
- A link back to the main Genealogytrails.com page is required."

It is similar in nature to the USGenWeb sets of sites, with one big difference in my opinion. Whereas the USGenWeb sites were allowed to have more freedom in templates, color, and presentation, the Genealogy Trails sites are quite similar from county to county, and state to state, which makes for a better user experience. There is an ability to search across and within states, which is useful. The content continues to grow.

To access the site, go to: GenealogyTrails.com

Hathitrust

Hathitrust began in 2008 as a consortium of 12 Mid-West universities which embody the Committee on Institutional Cooperation, and 11 universities from the University of California system. In essence, the goal was to create a digital repository of scholarly material and books. Copyright and other factors determine the availability of researchers to view documents in the repository. Currently, there are over 17 million volumes in the database. 38% of the content is in the public domain.

Although certainly different in content, database software, and user interface, Hathitrust is similar in concept to Google Books, Internet Archive, and the FamilySearch Digital Library in that they all are digital repositories of book and document content.

Hathitrust is certainly worth a genealogist's time to research. There is a variety of pertinent content that this researcher has discovered. Examples of the most numerous include college yearbooks, city directories, and alumni and school records. Where Hathitrust really shines is in the area of local history books that have been digitized.

You can search the Hathitrust Catalog entries or perform a full text search. Filtering of results can include Subject, Author, Language, Place of Publication, Date of Publication, Original Format, and Original Location.

To access the site, go to www.Hathitrust.org

Internet Archive

The Internet Archive has been around since 1996 and has a magnificent assortment of genealogical materials in many different categories of interest to genealogy researchers. It is a major resource; not to be missed.

Per Wikipedia, "As of December 2021, the Internet Archive holds over 34 million books and texts, 7.4 million movies, videos, and TV shows, 797,000 software programs, 13,991,923 audio files, 4.1 million images, and 640 billion web pages in the Wayback Machine." If you didn't know, the Wayback Machine is essentially a capture of webpages over time, thus a digital archive of the World Wide Web.

The Genealogy Project at the Archive includes items from the Allen County Public Library Genealogy Center in Fort Wayne, Indiana; Robarts Library at the University of Toronto; the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign Library; Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah; the National Library of Scotland; the Indianapolis City Library's Indianapolis City Directory and Yearbooks Collection, The Leo Baeck Institute Archives of German-speaking Jewry; and the Boston Public Library, just to name a few.

What types of information are available at Archive.org that is of interest to genealogists?

- Yearbooks: There are over 69,000 references to yearbooks in the collection. The states of Massachusetts, Virginia, and North Carolina use it as the online archive for high school and college yearbooks.
- City Directories: There are about 20,000 city and business directories, not to mention gazetteers and almanacs—another 10,000.
- Books: There are over 33,000 genealogy books of all kinds and subjects.

- Local History: There are 79,000 references to texts and audio regarding local history. Usually centering on a town, city, or county.
- Reclaim the Records: Has about 2,000 collections of vital records in the Archive.
- Town Records: There are over 52,000 town records (primarily from the New England states). Includes vital record information.
- Passenger and Crew Lists: Useful in immigration research, there are over 7,500 passenger and crew list documents.
- Parish Registers: Over 1,500 parish registers are in the Archive; most from the U.K.
- Church Records: Over 12,200 items in the Archive; including marriages, funerals, baptisms, membership, and other church records.
- Census Records: Not the most ideal way to find census records (we've been spoiled by the large collectors of census records providing us with indexes and search capability). But they are in the Archive.
- Pension Files: Payment cards and pension applications are included in collections numbering over 2,700.
- Passport Applications: Over 3,000 in this category.
- Family Genealogies: Over 3,700 collections of written materials about specific surnames.
- Probate: There are over 2,000 references for probate records.
- Newspapers: Over 1.3 million references in the newspapers at the Archive. About 700,000 from the U.S., and over 300,000 from China. Many are local titles; also included is a large collection of high school, college, and university student newspapers.
- Audio and Video: There are old radio shows; newsreels from the past; old music; military radio shows; oral history interviews. Most are from the United States (US) But there are many from other countries as well.

The key to success with the Internet Archive is to just search for what you wish. Try a few different keywords. That might help you dig up some gems that will assist you in your genealogy research.

National Archives - Archival Databases

Although this section of the Archives databases is just a small fraction of what the Archives holds, it is an important subset that is very useful for genealogy researchers.

From the Archives website: "You will find in the Access to Archival Databases (AAD) resource online access to records in a small selection of historic databases preserved permanently in NARA. NARA has selected less than 1% of the data files in its holdings for public searching through AAD. We selected these data because the records identify specific persons, geographic areas, organizations, and dates. The records cover a wide variety of civilian and military functions and have many genealogical, social, political, and economic research uses. AAD provides:

- Access to over 247 million historic electronic records created by more than 40 agencies of the US federal government and from collections of donated historical materials.
- Both free-text and fielded searching options.
- The ability to retrieve, print, and download records with the specific information that you seek.
- Information to help you find and understand the records."

Social Security Administration's (SSA's)
Numerical Identification Files (NUMIDENT)

This database contains Claim Files that has information extracted from Social Security life or death claims for 25 million deceased individuals. The records include information such as name, social security number, birth date, and birthplace. This is in addition to the nearly 50 million death records and 72 million application (SS-5) records. The URL is:
aad.Archives.gov/aad/series-description.jsp?s=5057&cat=all&bc=sl

I encourage you to read this tutorial in the Appendix of this book: How to Use the National Archives' Numident Files

Reclaim the Records

Reclaim the Records is a non-profit organization that strives to obtain genealogical record collections that "ought to be" in the public domain but are restricted by government organizations. They file FOIA and Open Data requests to obtain the records and if that fails to succeed, they go to court.

Once records are obtained, the organization digitizes the records and makes them available on repositories such as the Internet Archive for public use by genealogy researchers and anyone else who has an interest.

The organization began in 2015. Some of its achievements and projects (with links to descriptive information) follow.

USGenWeb

The USGenWeb Project was formed in 1996. It is a marvelous assortment of highly usable genealogy collections of all varieties and categories. It is a diverse (and sometimes eclectic) variety of genealogy records. It was and still is managed by and contributed to by volunteers.

It's history (from the USGenWeb project website): "In the spring of 1996, a group of genealogists led by Jeff Murphy organized the Kentucky Comprehensive Genealogy Database Project, which evolved into the KyGenWeb Project. The idea was to provide a single-entry point for genealogy data and research for all counties in Kentucky. In addition, the information for each county would be indexed and cross-linked to make it easier for researchers to find a name or data that they sought. In June 1996, as the KyGenWeb Project was nearing 100% county coverage, interested volunteers decided to create a similar set of pages for all states, establishing The USGenWeb Project. "

It is separated into state and county websites. Each county website has a collection of pages that are contained within the county site, as well as outbound links to collections on non-USGenWeb sites. There also are some special projects that have been created over the years:

- Family Group Sheets Project
- Kidz Project
- Tombstone Project
- US African American Griots Project

It is difficult to describe the breadth and depth of the material that is available via the USGenWeb Project. From lists to indexes to scanned images and old photos, it must be seen to be believed. It is in a word – Magnificent.

There are a few "negatives", however, in my opinion. Most of the sites have a different look and feel. So, you might find menus or link lists in different places from one county site to another. The colors are different from site to site and the presentation is totally different. It does make navigation a challenge. Many of the pages have not been updated for years, and there are broken links.

Despite the negatives, this important collection of websites should be used in your research. It is very likely that you will not find some of these records and indexes anywhere else.

To access the site, go to www.USGenWeb.org

USGenWeb Archives

The USGenWeb Archives, in my opinion, is one of the top 5 free genealogy websites. Its pages are almost all the same, so the user experience is excellent. There are state websites, further divided into county websites. Each county website presents links to collections and records by category. The naming conventions are universal, and it is very easy to navigate.

From the USGenWeb Archives website: "In June 1996, the USGenWeb Digital Library (USGenWeb Archives) was developed to present actual transcriptions of public domain records on the Internet. This huge undertaking is the cooperative effort of volunteers who either have electronically formatted files on census records, marriage bonds, wills, and other public documents, or are willing to transcribe this information to contribute."

The site also has developed some special projects that provide even more collections. The ones that are still active follow.

Link Sites

Introduction

A link site for the purpose of this book is a website that largely provides links to online collections rather than maintaining and providing the full contents of a collection.

The benefit of a successful link site is that its value is in the research that the site owners have done to categorized genealogical collections, check out the validity of a collection, and list that collections name and URL in a manner that visitors to the link site can easily find the link to a collection.

The challenge for a links site is to ensure that what they are listing as a link actually goes to that site. Broken links are a common frustration for link sites.

In summary, a link site does not house the "stuff' that you are looking for, but it makes it far easier to find the stuff in a collection online somewhere.

Cyndi's List

Cyndi's List is a massive and important resource for all genealogy researchers. It was started by Cyndi Ingle in 1996, and in my opinion is one of the most useful resources that can guide you in your personal research. It is much more than a card catalog. There are various ways to reach resource links that may help you.

Some of its characteristics are directly from the Cyndi's List website:

- A categorized & cross-referenced index to genealogical resources on the Internet.
- A list of links that point you to genealogical research sites online.
- A free jumping-off point for you to use in your online research.
- A "card catalog" to the genealogical collection in the immense library that is the Internet.
- Your genealogical research portal onto the Internet.

Other features are:

- You can start by location or by record category. This is extremely useful, as some other genealogy link sites only allow searching by location or category, but not both.
- Cyndi's List currently has over 315,000 links and about 230 categories and sub-categories

To access the site, go to www.CyndisList.com

Death Indexes

Death Indexes is one of several very useful websites provided by Joe Beine, and probably the most visited.

From the Website: "This website is a directory of links to websites with online death indexes, listed by state and county. Included are death records, death certificate indexes, death notices and registers, obituaries, wills and probate records, and cemetery burials. You can also find information here about searching the Social Security Death Index online."

The site then presents links to all 50 states in the United States, plus DC. When visiting a site page, you are presented with links in four types of sections: state level collections; county level collections; collections for very large cities (not in all states); and where you can order State Vital Records. For example, for Illinois, the section headings are:

- Online Illinois Death Records Indexes and Cemetery Burials
- Illinois Death Records Indexes, Obituaries and Cemeteries by County
- Chicago and Cook County Death Indexes, Records and Obituaries
- Ordering Illinois Vital Records

Mr. Beine also has created a similar state level website for naturalization records and other Genealogy categories on his "Online Genealogy Records and Resources" page.

To access the site, go to www.DeathIndexes.com

DP.LA

DP.LA is one of my favorite websites to use for genealogy research. An overstatement would be is that is like a Google search for library databases. Since all library and other similar institutions do not participate, it does not have the breadth of content that a Google search into all library databases might have.

Yet, it is a good way to perform searches to find what library databases are online, without digging into every library website that is out there, one-by-one.

Here is some background information from the DP.LA website.

"Our Mission: The Digital Public Library of America empowers people to learn, grow, and contribute to a diverse and better-functioning society by maximizing access to our shared history, culture, and knowledge.

Our Strategy: The Digital Public Library of America amplifies the value of libraries and cultural organizations as Americans' most trusted sources of shared knowledge. We do this by collaborating with partners to accelerate innovative tools and ideas that empower and equip libraries to make information more accessible.

We work with a national network of partners to:

- Make millions of materials from libraries, archives, museums, and other cultural institutions across the country available to all in a one-stop discovery experience.
- Provide a library-controlled marketplace and platform for libraries to purchase, organize, and deliver eBooks and other e-content to their patrons.
- Convene library leaders and practitioners to explore and advance technologies that serve, inform, and empower their communities.

- In addition, the site has a Browse by Topics area, Online Exhibitions, and the ability to download one of over 11,000 eBooks."

There is a newsletter as well, and one for the Genealogy topic area, which could be helpful to any researcher.

To access the site, go to DP.LA

I Dream of Genealogy

The "I Dream of Genealogy" website is not very well known, but it has a set of its own collections and links to other collections. It started in 1998.

From the website: "Here you will find free online genealogy databases, compiled family histories, vital record resources, famous and celebrity family trees, lost and found family heirlooms, genealogy search, and you can submit your own family records to the free databases.

You can also search over 60,000 free genealogy databases - marriage records, cemeteries, vital records from the United States, Canada, Ireland, Europe, Australia, just to name a few."

The Genealogy Resources section is the meat of the site. Generally, it is broken down by genealogical category and then by location. For the U.S., that would be the state, and then the county. There are some international collections on the site as well.

Here is a list of the categories of collections:

- African-American Genealogy
- Biographies / Bibles/ Letters / Photos / Family Items
- Birth Records
- Cemetery Records
- Census Records
- Church Records
- Court Records / Naturalization / Probate
- County and Town Histories
- Death Records and Obituaries
- Directories and Residency Records
- Divorce Records
- Land Records and Maps
- Marriage Records

- Migration and Ship Passenger Lists
- Military Records
- Native American Genealogy
- Newspapers
- Prison / Arrest Records
- Recipes (Recipes of Ancestors) NEW Category
- School Records
- Surnames / Families
- Tax / Commerce / Financial / Business Directories and Records

A significant percentage of the links go to USGenWebArchives collections and records, but there are quite another significant percentage that cannot be found elsewhere.

To access the site, go to: www.IDreamOf.com

LDS Genealogy

LDS Genealogy dot com is a massive set of links to genealogical records, collections, and websites. It includes links to free resources as well as those resources that require a subscription. I encourage you to read the website's FAQ page, which is at: LDSGenealogy.com/faqs.htm

Contrary to what one might surmise about the title - the site is not owned by the LDS Church. The LDS actually stands for Learning, Directory, and Source Finder. The site is owned by one individual, Jeniann Nielsen.

One of my favorite things about the site is that you can access links by type of record in addition to location. Not all "link sites" provide this "Both ways" option.

It is useful to have links to subscription databases as well as free databases, although I find that there are many more subscription links than free online links. The subscription database links are a lot easier to discover, while free online links are much more difficult to dig up.

Like all "link sites" there are a number of broken links. That happens frequently when presenting links. It is good to know that the owner frequently attempts to fix broken links. I did find however, that a number of links to Ancestry dot com were broken.

To access the site, go to LDSGenealogy.com

Linkpendium

Linkpendium is included here as a Link Site, but it has some very special features that users should try out.

The site was built in the early 2000s. The creators, Karen and Karen and Brian "Wolf" Leverich were the original creators of Rootsweb which occurred in the 1990s.

You can search by location to see what categories of collections are available, along with the links to each collection. This is the typical link list approach. In addition, the site provides links to message boards and forums for that location, which can be extremely helpful.

They include subscription databases in the collection link lists as well as those that are free.

The real power (for me at least), is the ability to do a Surname search, where certain collections are searched for that surname, with the results returned to you. This is very powerful. In addition, the Family Discoverer is a way to do a deep dive using a surname. I suggest that be tried as well, especially for unique surnames.

I would recommend the use of this site. However, it suffers from the same malady that all link list sites suffer from – and that is Broken Links. With over 10 million links, there are bound to be many that are broken, and my use of this site has turned up many.

To access the site, go to www.Linkpendium.com

New Horizons Genealogy

New Horizons Genealogy is a site that has links for every state in the US in a variety of genealogy categories. It specializes in New England and New York Colonial American Ancestry.

Our record collections include, Vital records, Arnold Collection of Rhode Island Vital Records, Barbour Collection of Connecticut Vital Records, Colonial and State Census records, Federal and State Census Mortality Schedules, Cemetery records, 1840 Census of Pensioners and Revolutionary War Soldiers Buried in New York State. We also include links to other quality genealogy records to help make these collections as complete as possible"*

They cover a wide variety of genealogy categories, such as:

- Adoption
- Barbour Collection
- Biographies
- Cemetery Records
- Census Records
- Church Records
- History
- Immigration Records
- Military Records

- Obituaries
- Vital Records
- Wills/Probate Records

The Ancestor Hunt

The Ancestor Hunt provides a list of links to free online record collections in 25 different major genealogy categories. Unlike the FamilySearch Wiki and Cyndi's List for example, The Ancestor Hunt does not have subcategories. The Ancestor Hunt also has articles about genealogy research and tools and techniques to enhance your ability to be a successful researcher.

Along the way of doing my own genealogical research, I discovered dozens of techniques that greatly improved my progress in this journey. The Ancestor Hunt website was created in 2010 to share those techniques and tips.

As I got "good at" newspaper research, I discovered that there did not seem to be very many genealogists and family historians that used newspapers much as a tool. And there were no "places to go" to learn newspaper research best practices. So, the next few years, The Ancestor Hunt was devoted to historical newspaper research methods. And I decided to build a list of links to digitized newspaper collections and online historical newspaper titles. What started as 10,000 links to Free Online Newspaper Titles in 2014 has blossomed to over 80,000 for the US, Europe, and Canada.

I then decided to create lists to free online collections for additional categories of collections that most researchers seek: Photos, Obituaries, and Birth, Marriage, and Death Records. Since that time, more categories have been added. There are now 25 different genealogical categories of links to free online collections, totaling 220,000 links.

Library Sites

Introduction

Most libraries, even smaller public libraries, have a genealogy section on their website. They may even have some online collections, maybe just obituaries from the local area.

But there are a dozen or so large libraries that have numerous online genealogy collections. And some are genealogy-only libraries.

And of course, the largest is the Library of Congress in Washington, DC.

Library of Congress Digital Collections

The Library of Congress (LOC) Digital Collections are large and growing. Currently there are 501 different collections. You should definitely incorporate this massive set of collections into your genealogy research. They are divided into 15 different topics (the number of collections is in brackets):

World Cultures & History [136]
LOC.gov/collections/?fa=subject_topic:world+cultures+%26+history

You can see all the specific collections by selecting a topic. You can also drill down by Original Format, Online Format, Date, and Location. There are several other drill-down criteria, such as by original format. The main original formats are:

- Photo, Print, Drawing
- Manuscript/Mixed Material
- Periodical
- Book/Printed Material
- Legislation
- Newspaper
- Notated Music
- Web Page
- Personal Narrative
- Map
- Audio Recording
- Web Archive

There are currently over 3 million items in the collections. There is plenty of material to search for and discover. The Library of Congress holds another 22 million items yet to be digitized, so there is a lot to discover online in the future.

There are three topics that are quite useful, although many of them might have pertinent information that can assist us. On the surface, Local History & Folklife, War & Military, and Geography & Places is where I started, to see what might advance my research.

The collections with many different types of maps are quite helpful and extensive. Take a look at the list of these digital collections. You may find some real gems that can assist you in your research.

Cemetery Sites

Introduction

There are several online websites that specialize in cemetery collections. Some have detailed information about "residents" of the cemetery, while others feature memorials, which include a photo of the tombstone as well as information about the deceased, such as location in the cemetery, birth and death dates, and relatives also buried in the cemetery.

FindaGrave

FindaGrave is one of the most popular genealogy sites. It was started many years ago as a site to record where celebrities were buried and since its inception in 1995, it has grown into a massive site, recording photos of gravesites and including memorials to millions of deceased individuals.

The history is best summarized from the FindaGrave website: "Find a Grave got its start in 1995 when founder Jim Tipton built a website to share his hobby of visiting the graves of famous people. He found that many people shared his interest and quickly opened the site for all individuals (famous and non-famous) with a mission for finding, recording and presenting burial and final disposition information worldwide. Since then, millions of contributors have been entering memorials, photos, GPS locations, biographies and other rich content to the site. As the site grew, the community grew also. FindaGrave houses the largest international graving community in the world. In 2013, Find a Grave became a wholly owned subsidiary of Ancestry® and launched a new iOS mobile app. The Android app was released in 2014. Ancestry redesigned the website and released it in August 2018. The community continues to add and update memorials every day. We look forward to an exciting future for the site and the community!"

On their Instagram page, they claim a total of 180 million memorials recorded since 1995. As with many genealogy volunteer-based sites, FindaGrave and its owner Ancestry do not assume any legal responsibility for the accuracy of the information on the site.

Access the site at www.FindaGrave.com

Interment.net

Interment.net was started in 1997 as a directory of links to cemetery websites. Since that time, they expanded to begin including burial records that contains the name of the deceased, cemetery, and its location; location of the burial plot; and birth, death, and burial dates.

To access the site, go to www.Interment.net

National Cemetery Administration

The National Cemetery Administration manages all the national cemeteries that bury Veterans of the Military.

The two main areas of interest of the website are the ability to find a national cemetery and the very popular Grave Locator.

The National Gravesite Locator is an online database that includes (from the website): "Burial locations of veterans and their family members in VA National Cemeteries, state veterans cemeteries, various other military and Department of Interior cemeteries, and for veterans buried in private cemeteries when the grave is marked with a government grave marker."

You can search by entering the following possible search fields:

- Cemetery
- Last Name
- Middle name
- First Name
- Date of Birth
- Date of Death

To access the site, go to www.Cem.VA.gov

Patriot and Grave Registry

The Patriot Research System is a website provided by the Sons of the American Revolution (SAR). It provides several databases of interest to Revolutionary War era genealogy researchers.

From their website: "The PRS is a combination of the previous NSSAR Patriot and Graves Registry (Online), NSSAR Revolutionary War Graves Registry (Book and CD), information from the NSSAR Patriot Index CD (2002), and additional information and updates from various State Grave Registry Databases. This database will continue to expand as new patriots and graves are found and new members are approved."

The system provides several ways to search the database:

- Patriot Search
- Member Search
- Descendant Search
- Biography Search
- Cemetery Search

To access the site, go to SARPatriots.SAR.org

Newspaper Sites

Introduction

Newspapers are the storytellers of our ancestors. We can obtain vital information such as birth, marriage, and death dates; and locations from newspaper obituaries, birth announcements, and marriage announcements.

Without ancestors or relatives alive to tell us their stories, where are we going to find out about our ancestors' lives? Newspapers!

Let me tell you a little story about my great-great-uncle Max. At the most, there are two people alive in this world (including me) who know anything about him. My Dad's brother had mentioned him. He just had a vague memory of him but no details. His cousins don't remember a thing. And there are only two close relatives older than me. "Max was not married and had no children. He was a barber. Before that, he owned a pool hall, and the couple that was going to buy it got mad because he was going to back out. So, they tried to kill him and shot at him in his pool hall, and he was severely wounded in his shoulder. And the wife the next day shot and killed her husband and then killed herself the following day." The pool hall story – where did I get that? From a series of newspaper articles.

You can subscribe to several newspaper databases, such as Newspapers dot com, Newspaper Archive, Genealogy Bank, and British Newspaper Archive, just to name a few. But they are not free.

The Ancestor Hunt website has cataloged the online newspaper database titles that are available to search and browse in the United States. There are about 45,000 of them.

This section discusses these databases.

Chronicling America

Chronicling America is a nationwide database of online newspapers available for free for any researcher. The site was started in 2005 as a result of the National Digital Newspaper Program (NDNP), which is a partnership between the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), and the Library of Congress. It went live in 2007. Every year NEH provides grants to about ten or so states to digitize approximately 100,000 historical newspaper pages from that state. Certain technical requirements must be met so that the resulting digitized files can be imported into the Chronicling America database.

As of 2022, all 50 states, plus the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the US Virgin Islands are part of the NDNP. New Hampshire just joined in 2022 and was awarded a grant, so we soon will see newspapers from all 50 states in the Chronicling America database. Recently, Chronicling America surpassed 20 million digitized newspaper pages in its database. The range of dates for these newspapers is between 1777 and 1963.

To read more about the program, go to:
National Digital Newspaper Program

To find out more about Chronicling America, go to:
Chronicling America
ChroniclingAmerica.LOC.gov

A tutorial about how to use Chronicling America's Advanced Search is in the Appendix of this book. The chapter is entitled: Chronicling America: Mastering the Advanced Search

NDNP Extras

The NDNP pages at the Chronicling America website also provide substantial information and links to what they call "EXTRAS", which are extremely useful. Some of them are:

- Tips for Searching Chronicling America
- Teaching Resources
- Using Chronicling America to Advance Research and Scholarship
- chronam (LOC Newspaper Viewer Software)
- State Newspaper Project Blogs (NDNP Awardees)
- Video

NDNP Extras can be accessed by going to: LOC.gov/ndnp/extras

Besides the ability to search or browse digitized newspaper pages on its website, the site also offers the ability to search the US Newspaper Directory, which has accumulated information about most newspapers published in the United States between 1690 to the present. It is a very useful tool, in that it helps identify which library, archive or other institution has copies of the original, microfilm or other copy type in its collection.

To search the U. S. Newspaper Directory, go to:

A description and tutorial about how to use the US Newspaper Directory can be found in the Appendix of this book. The chapter is entitled: The Easiest Way to Find Historical Newspapers in America

Veridian

Veridian Software is the product and service provided by DL Consulting, a company that resides in Hamilton, New Zealand. They specialize in national newspaper collections worldwide, large statewide collections in the United States, and universities.

Some of the unique features of their software is the ability to handle different alphabets, such as Hebrew for the National Library of Israel, and the Japanese alphabet for the Hoji Shinbun Digital Collection of primarily Japanese American newspapers. This collection is provided by the Hoover Institution at Stanford University.

Another unique feature is the ability, via crowdsourcing, for registered users to make corrections to the text that resulted from the Optical Character Recognition (OCR) process. Since digitized newspaper research is primarily dependent on the quality of the original newsprint, which is often over 140 years old, the ability for users to positively contribute to the newspaper index is a useful feature.

Currently they have about 50 installations of their software. They have provided solutions for the National Libraries in Switzerland, Estonia, Israel, Singapore, and New Zealand. They also have statewide collections in California, Michigan, Colorado, Wyoming, Indiana, Virginia, Illinois, and Washington state. Over 30 universities are currently using Veridian software as well. Adding all their collections together yields about 80 million newspaper pages.

Their website is VeridianSoftware.com.

Veridian is also the creator of Elephind, a federated search capability for multiple newspaper databases. Veridian has combined several of their largest collections into a database searchable all at once, Some of the largest collections searchable by Elephind total about 4,000 titles. They are:

- Trove [National Library of Australia]
- Chronicling America [US Library of Congress]
- California Digital Newspaper Collection [UC Riverside]
- Colorado Historic Newspapers Collection (CHNC)
- The Portal to Texas History
- Illinois Digital Newspaper Collections (UIUC)
- Library of Virginia
- Indiana Digital Historic Newspaper Program (Indiana State Library)

For more information about Elephind, and to use the Elephind search engine, go to: Elephind.com.

Advantage Archives

Advantage Archives is the name of the company headquartered in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. They specialize in microfilming and digitizing various document types for over 870 libraries, archives, museums, and other types of institutions across the US and Canada.

It is best to use their own words to describe their business. From their website: "We provide archival microfilming services to preserve a community's past and digitize historical collections and documents of all kinds to make them practical to access in the present. We collaborate with communities across the United States to create free digital access to historical newspaper collections, photos, genealogy books, magazines, yearbooks, vital records, and other documents of significance."

Almost every state in the US has a client of Advantage Archives. The states with the largest number of libraries are Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska, Massachusetts, New York, and Texas.

The Community History Archives (CHAs), as they are named by Advantage, are free for all users to access and to search and browse. Over 90% of the CHAs are accessible from anywhere. A small percentage of their clients restrict access to an "in-library" experience for copyright and other reasons.

There are over 100 million newspaper pages available to search amongst all the 870 clients of Advantage Archives. There is no "Federated Search", i.e., each database is separate, and must be searched separately.

Their website is: www.AdvantageArchives.com

A directory of all their installations is available at directory.advantage-preservation.com/SiteDirectory

Old Fulton New York Post Cards

Fulton Postcards

In a word, the Old Fulton New York Postcards website is a marvel. Created and maintained by one man, Tom Tryniski, this newspaper database has been in existence since 1999 when Tom began scanning microfilmed newspapers. Currently his database has over 50 million digitized newspaper pages that are searchable by anyone, anywhere.

It initially began with newspapers close to Tom's Fulton, New York home. It expanded to include hundreds of titles from New York state. In the last few years, more newspapers were added from other states in the US.

The website can appear eclectic but is highly usable once you get the hang of it. It does have its downtime unfortunately, but that is typically because of the handy work of hackers.

Although there are companies and sites such as those mentioned in this section that have larger overall numbers of titles from many collections, the Fulton site is the largest free, single online database in the US. It's amazing to think that Chronicling America, the Library of Congress' site, has only 40% of the number of pages as the Fulton site.

Don't think that the site has only New York newspapers. There are about 1,000 New York titles, but there are hundreds of titles now from other states.

To access the site, go to FultonHistory.com/Fulton.html

Google News Archive

Google News Archive is included here, not because of its feature robustness, but because it still can be used and is a sizable collection. It was launched in 2008, and surprisingly, in 2011 Google announced that they were no longer going to add new content to the site. Later in 2011 they shut the service down, and then revived it.

At the time of the shutdown, Google announced that searching pre-1970 content was no longer available. Yet I can retrieve some newspaper images from 1912 via their search capability. So, it may work for you for some pre-1970 content, and maybe not.

Browsing of digitized newspaper content was and still is available to site visitors. At the time of the cessation of new content, there were about 2,440 titles available; approximately 1,500 of the titles are from the United States and 950 titles from Canada.

To access the site, go to news.google.com/newspapers

Miscellaneous Sites

Introduction

Miscellaneous sites in this chapter include map sites, photo sites, and a few other types of helpful online resources.

Dead Fred

In short, Dead Fred is a photo archive. The site has been in existence for over 20 years. From the website: "Dead Fred's Genealogy Photo Archive, a free, fun photo genealogy research web site devoted to helping you visualize your heritage!"

If you are interested in obtaining a photo of your ancestors, you should try Dead Fred. There are not millions of identified photos, but you can search rapidly and determine if there is a hit for the ancestor you are seeking. Dead Fred has a few thousand people who have contributed photos to the site. There currently are about 23,000 surnames and over 150,000 record in the database. The main functions of the site are as follows:

- Search Photos – You can search by 12 different fields, including name, date range, and location, as well as photographer. You can even specify the type of photo to search for.
- Post Photos – If you wish to contribute a photo, you use this function.
- Surnames – You can select the surname from a list, and the results will be all photos of people with that surname.
- Mysteries – Search through the Mysteries section of the database, where there is incomplete information regarding the photo subject.
- Photographers – You can search through a list of known photographers and which photos in the database were
- Annuals – There is a list of yearbooks, sorted by year, where you can look at the photo pages of yearbooks. There is not a great number, but it is worth a look.

There is an excellent FAQ section, which likely answers almost all questions a user might have. Dead Fred is a fun and easily usable site that might have a photo of your ancestor!

To access the site, go to DeadFred.com

Freedmen's Bureau Online

The Freedman's Bureau Online website is an important set of links to genealogy collections to assist African Americans in researching their ancestors.

From the website: "The Freedmen's Bureau, was established in the War Department by an act of March 3, 1865. The Bureau supervised all relief and educational activities relating to refugees and freedmen, including issuing rations, clothing and medicine. The Bureau also assumed custody of confiscated lands or property in the former Confederate States, border states, District of Columbia, and Indian Territory. The bureau records were created or maintained by bureau headquarters, the assistant commissioners and the state superintendents of education and included personnel records and a variety of standard reports concerning bureau programs and conditions in the states."

There are 4 categories of record collection links on the website:

- Related Websites
- Murders and Outrages
- Freedmen's Labor Records
- Marriage Records

You can also find collections by clicking on a state name. Available are 13 southern states and Washington DC.

To access the site, go to www.FreedmensBureau.com

The Official Land Records Site

The US Department of the Interior (DoI) Bureau of Land Management (BLM) has a very rich website with several search engines to assist in genealogy research for your ancestors who had land.

From the website: "Welcome to the Bureau of Land Management (BLM), General Land Office (GLO) Records Automation web site. We provide live access to Federal land conveyance records for the Public Land States, including image access to more than five million Federal land title records issued between 1788 and the present. We also have images of survey plats and field notes, land status records, and control document index records. Due to organization of documents in the GLO collection, this site does not currently contain every Federal title record issued for the Public Land States."

The different search capabilities are:

- Land Patents
- Survey Plats and Field Notes
- Land Status Records
- Control Document
- Index Records
- Tract Books
- Land Catalog

There also is a robust Reference Center that contains detailed descriptions of each type of document, search tips, and an outstanding set of Appendices that will help explain a lot of the terms used, as well as many other details that help a researcher understand the idiosyncrasies of federal and public land. For the uninitiated, this website is a marvelous collection of information.

To access the site, go to GLORecords.BLM.gov

Civil War Soldiers and Sailors Database

The Civil War Soldiers and Sailors Database is a website that is provided by the National Park Service (NPS).

From the website: "The Civil War Soldiers and Sailors System (CWSS) is a database containing information about the men who served in the Union and Confederate armies during the Civil War. Other information on the site includes histories of Union and Confederate regiments, links to descriptions of significant battles, and selected lists of prisoner-of-war records and cemetery records, which will be amended over time. The CWSS is a cooperative effort between the National Park Service and several public and private partners whose goal is to increase Americans' understanding of this decisive era in American history by making information about it widely accessible."

There are over 6 million entries in the Soldiers database, and 17,000 in the Sailors database. You can search by name, and then filter by side, state, and battle unit function.

In addition, there is an abundance of other information, such as stories, mini biographies of pertinent people, as well as key places in the war.

Not only is the database itself significant for tracking down your Civil War Soldier or Sailor, but the website has a ton of information and facts about the war itself.

This is an important website. To access the site, go to www.NPS.gov/civilwar/soldiers-and-sailors-database.htm

David Rumsey's Historical Maps

If you are looking for maps to aid in your genealogy research, the David Rumsey Map Collection website should not be missed. It has a terrific search engine with associated tools, as well as an abundance of information.

From the website: "The David Rumsey Map Collection was started over 35 years ago and contains more than 150,000 maps. The collection focuses on rare 16th through 21st century maps of North and South America, as well as maps of the World, Asia, Africa, Europe, and Oceania. The collection includes atlases, globes, wall maps, school geographies, pocket maps, books of exploration, maritime charts, and a variety of cartographic materials including pocket, wall, children, and manuscript maps. Items range in date from around 1550 to the present. Digitization of the collection began in 1996 and there are now over 118,000 items online."

Additional tools and features include:

- Interactive Globes
- Georeferencer
- MapRank Search

There is a robust Help Center that includes Frequently Asked Questions as well as information on how to use the Luna Viewer and Browser.

To access the site, go to www.DavidRumsey.com

Sanborn Maps

The Sanborn Map Collection is available via the Library of Congress. There are maps available from all 50 states in the US, and DC, as well as Canada, Cuba, and Mexico.

From the website: "The Sanborn Fire Insurance Maps Online Checklist provides a searchable database of the fire insurance maps published by the Sanborn Map Company housed in the collections of the Geography and Map Division. The online checklist is based upon the Library's 1981 publication Fire Insurance Maps in the Library of Congress and will be continually updated to reflect new acquisitions."

By clicking on the Collection Items link on the site, it displays over 35,000 online maps. Using the filters, you can narrow down the maps by date range and location, such as state and county.

There also are some Articles and essays with detailed information about the maps, including:

- Introduction to the Collection
- Sanborn Samplers
- Sanborn Time Series

To access the site, go to LOC.gov/collections/sanborn-maps

AncientFaces

Ancient Faces is a community-driven collection of photos. You can search by name, but also browse by themes, people categories, date ranges, and places.

From the website: "AncientFaces.com was officially launched in 2000 by Founder & Creator Daniel J. Pinna, and his mother, Founder & Community and Content Director Kathy Pinna. Over time, AncientFaces has grown from just a few people with a simple concept that has evolved into a mission shared by millions around the world."

For me, I found it useful to perform a search by a person's name and to browse to a specific state and look through the photos and names. There is also a Biography section which is also useful to search and browse.

Personally, I have had no luck finding an ancestor or relative, but there is a lot of photos and Bios on the site, and it is certainly worth your time to search and browse.

To access the site, go to www.AncientFaces.com

Ellis Island

Tens of millions of people can trace at least one ancestor from Ellis Island. Personally, about 50 of my ancestors came through Ellis Island.

From the website: "The Passenger Search database allows you to look for family members who arrived at the Port of New York from 1820 to 1957. At the Ellis Island National Museum of Immigration and on the Foundation's website you can explore your family heritage by searching nearly 65 million passenger records and ship manifests, examining information collected at debarkation points."

There is a very good search capability. You can search for passengers, as well as ships. With the Passenger Search function, you enter a person's name. You can specify the following criteria for the search; Contains, Exact Matches, Close Matches, Sounds Like, Alternate Spellings, and Last Name as First.

To access the site, go to www.StatueofLiberty.org/ellis-island

FamilySearch has three collections that are useful for searching for your ancestors who entered the country through the Port of New York.

Google Databases

Google has several search engines and databases that are very useful for genealogy researchers. Here is an overview of some of these databases and functions.

Google Books has a seemingly never-ending supply of digitized books. And there is an ample number of old books that can be used in your genealogy research. Generally, there are two types of entries: books that are digitized and full text of the entire book is available online, and books where only partial sections or pages are available, and only snippets of your resultant search results provide useful information.

The URL is books.google.com

Google Patents presents a search engine to find old patents from around the world. Personally, I found that five of my ancestors held patents, much to my surprise, and several of them were from the 1800s!

The URL is patents.google.com

Google Cache provides the ability to see a previous version of a web page. This is particularly useful when you get a 404 Error or a "File Not Found" page when going to a website. Just enter "cache:" in front (do not enter the quotes) of the desired webpages URL, and it will take you to a previous version of the page.

Google Scholar provides a simple way to broadly search for scholarly literature. From one place, you can search across many disciplines and sources: articles, theses, books, abstracts, and court opinions, from academic publishers, professional societies, online repositories, universities, and other web sites.

The URL is scholar.google.com

Google Images has over 28 billion images in its database. Similar search functions as in generic Google Search are available. There also is a reverse image search. This is particularly useful for genealogists as it may find other researchers who have the same or similar photo as that of your ancestor that you are performing the reverse image search for or even an image base somewhere with pertinent photos. This can also be used to find larger or better quality versions of the same image.

The URL is images.google.com

Google Maps and Google Earth are particularly useful for genealogists as we can see visually what a house, business, or other property looks like. Also creating custom maps of our ancestors' residences can also provide us with genealogical clues.

The URLs are www.google.com/maps and earth.google.com/web

Google Translate is very useful when attempting to convert written documents, letters, or other material from the language of the "old country" to current language. There are over 100 languages available.

The URL is translate.google.com

Google Alerts is an excellent resource for genealogy researchers. It is like having a constant search running all the time. It won't necessarily search inside databases or their records, but if a mention of a person, surname, or whatever else you set the Alert up for occurs in a new resource or news article, you will be sent an email. It can be your secret weapon!

The URL is www.google.com/alerts

Google Search of course is the ubiquitous search engine that we all use, have used, or are familiar with. There are several tricks to use to optimize one's results, especially when searching for ancestors.

A description of 17 different Google search techniques is in the Appendix of this book. The chapter is entitled: 17 Tips for Using Google Search for Genealogy.

Section 3:

Appendix

Two Hidden Secrets for the FamilySearch Catalog

Here are two hidden secrets to find a ton more results from the FamilySearch catalog. Full disclosure: I love the FamilySearch (FS) Catalog! For those collections that are available online, and the books that have been digitized, there are hundreds of thousands to choose from. For the online collections and books, I can use my PC at home to scroll through digitized page after digitized page, just as if I had my own microfilm reader, only without the hassle. But there are a couple of hidden secrets that you need to know if you wish to maximize your results. And they are not easy to discover, which is why I am relating them to you now.

Secret #1: Use Keyword Searches

The first secret relates to searching through the catalog for records. Let's first look at the catalog's search function.

What I want to find are Funeral Home records from Los Angeles County, California that are available only online. I am not interested in knowing where the microfilm is located or those that are only available at a Family History Center (FHC).

The logical place to start is to enter the place for which the collections have been digitized by clicking on [Place] in the top menu.

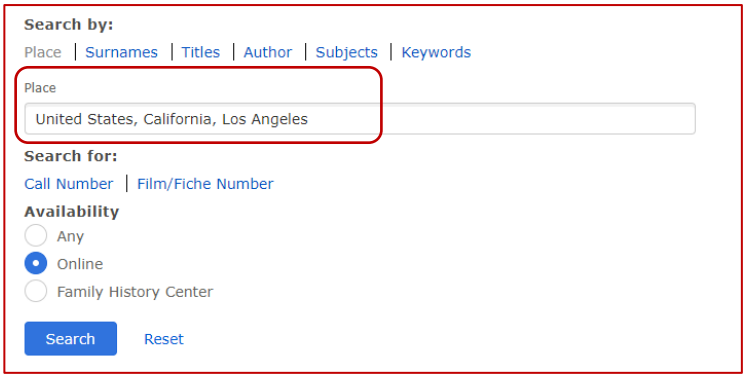
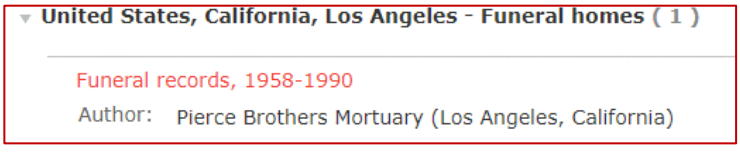
The first screen is where I enter the Place, and the online catalog will show me which collections are available. For entering the place, I click in that [Place] textbox, enter “Los Angeles,” and then select from the pop-up menu, "United States, California, Los Angeles", which signifies Los Angeles County.

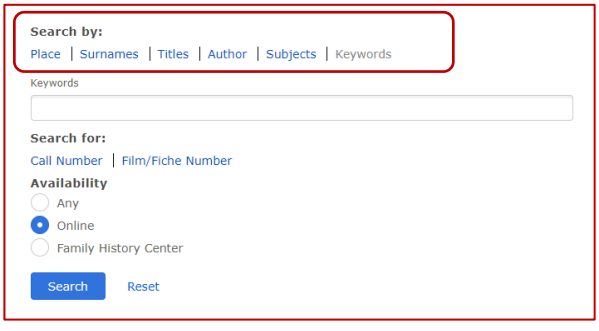


Here is the screen of results after entering the Place and clicking the [Search] button.

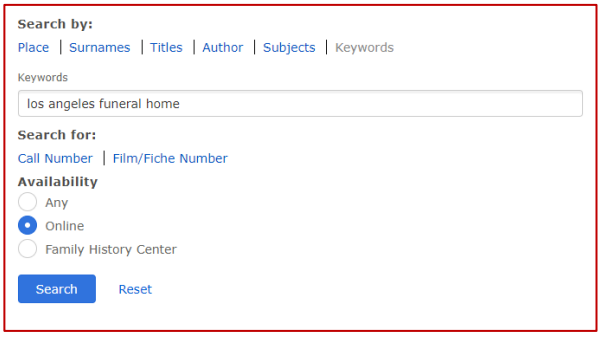
As you can see, it presents me with one Funeral Home collection. Only one. This is what is presented to me when I click on that line - a collection for Pierce Brothers Mortuary.



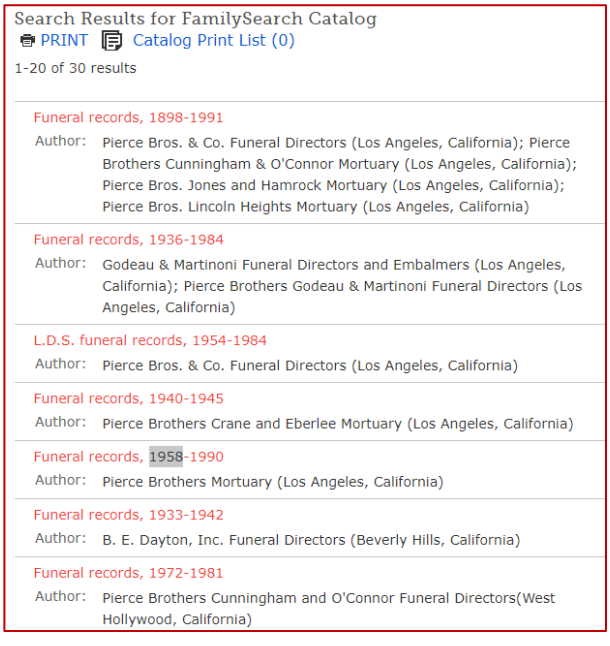
Now for the secret trick that will optimize the number of collections returned to you. This time I am going to go back to the main search screen and click on [Keywords] in the top menu, ignoring the Place for now.



On this screen, I make sure that the [Online] availability option is selected, I enter "los angeles funeral home" in the [Keyword] textbox, and click the [Search] button.



Holy mackerel! Now there are 30 online funeral home collections for Los Angeles County. The one we found in the very first search appears as the fifth hit in the second search using just keywords. So, entering the place in the Place box doesn't retrieve the optimal number of collections.

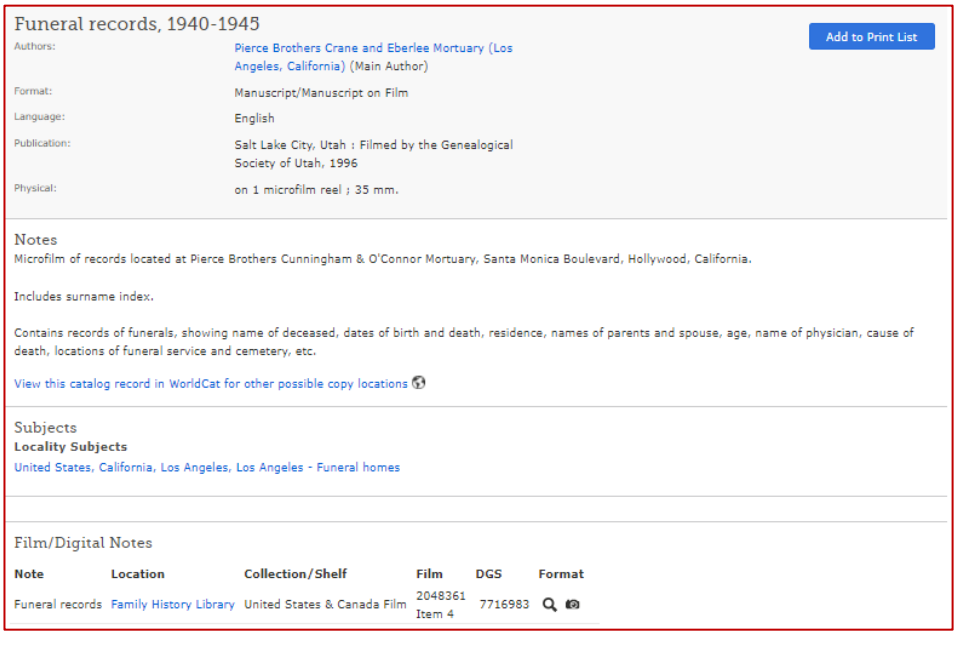


Secret #1 Summary: Always use keyword searching when looking for online collections from the FamilySearch Catalog, and make sure that you select the [Online] option before clicking on [Search]. You will receive far more pertinent results.

Secret #2: Stay Logged In

- When searching in FamilySearch, however you are doing it, you need to first have a free account and be logged in (or signed in). It is really easy to sign up.
- But here is the kicker: FamilySearch logs me out all the time when I am using the site, unbeknownst to me. I am going to show you the results of a FamilySearch Catalog search, and one of the collections that is in the results list.
- The first image example is when I am logged in, and the second image example when I have been logged out, and I will show you the differences.
- The differences are stark when you are looking for online collections, which I will discuss.

While these images are small to fit on this page, they look the same, right?



Nope. See at the bottom right under "Format"? The logged in image has a camera icon, and the logged-out image has a camera with a key.

What's the difference, you ask? Near the bottom of each collection page under Film/Digital Notes is the name of each sub-collection.

- If there is a camera icon at the right of the name (in the Format column) then the collections' images are browsable online.
- If there is a camera with a key icon, it is only available at a Family History Center or affiliated library.
- If there is a film reel icon, then it is only available in microfilm format, not digital.
- Finally, if there is a magnifying glass icon, the collection is searchable.

Secret #2 Summary: Always stay logged in. And regularly check if you are on the site for a long time because FamilySearch will log you out regularly if you are on a long time, and you won't even know it unless you look at the top right of each page where it tells you if you are signed in or not.

FamilySearch Summary: The Moral of the Story is easy to remember: When searching the FS Catalog, 1) always use keyword searches and 2) always stay signed in. That's all there is to optimizing your results that you can browse through - online - at home - in your PJs if you are so inclined!

The Easiest Way to Find Historical Newspapers in America

The fact is that not all old newspapers ever published in the United States are online. In fact, much fewer than you might think. What is your guess of the percentage? 10%? 20%? 5%? No, the answer (at least with respect to Chronicling America) is that there are approximately 3,500 online titles and there have been over 156,000 titles ever published in the US. That yields just a tad over 2.2%. That's not much, is it?

Of course, Chronicling America doesn't represent all of the online titles and digitized pages available. My research results in about 37,000 free online links for the US. So, 37,000 (online) in comparison to 156,000 (published) – that's about 24% of the titles. What about some of the paid sites, such as GenealogyBank, Newspaper.com, etc.? GenealogyBank on their website claims over 13,000 titles and Newspapers dot com states 20,000. And that doesn't count Newspaper Archive, MyHeritage, or FindMyPast's collections. And there is considerable overlap probably.

So, if we are being generous, let's add another 15% for the paid sites. That says that 30% have been digitized. That's titles, NOT pages. A single title that has one page from one issue in our math example counts the same as a title published daily for every year for a hundred years. The moral of the story is that with all the date gaps that we newspaper researchers run into – it is almost impossible to figure out how much indeed has been digitized.

So, let's just say for now that 15 to 30% of all US newspaper pages have been digitized. Personally, I think that's a very high number.

That leaves about 70-85% that are NOT online! Now, what the heck do we do? Offline research – that's what. And the Library of Congress helps us out with the US Newspaper Directory from 1690 to Present so we can do offline research (ChroniclingAmerica.LOC.gov/search/titles). This handy directory provides not just multiple ways to find newspapers published, but tons of facts about those newspapers. Just do your choice of searches from the main US Newspaper Directory from 1690 to Present page. Here's an example of a "fact" page".

So, you can see that it is available for your browsing pleasure at several libraries and archives—both in original and in microfilm form. Don't give up if your paper of interest is not online. Visit the US Newspaper Directory from 1690 to Present from the Library of Congress. Good Luck: persistence will win out.

Chronicling America: Mastering the Advanced Search

There are two methods to search the Library of Congress "Chronicling America" (ChroniclingAmerica.LOC.gov) for historical newspapers.

1) Basic Search, available from the Home Page as well as the "Search Pages" tab, allows you to enter your search criteria, and restrict results to a single state and to a range of years.

2) The Advanced Search, which I highly recommend that you use most if not all of the time, has TEN different fields that you can enter that will allow you to narrow your search. Below the image is a description of each of these fields and how to use them.

- Select State: One or more states can be selected, by holding the CTRL key and clicking on all of the states that you wish to search at one time; or you can choose "All states".
- Select Newspaper(s): You can select one or more (or all) newspapers from which to conduct the search. Note that selecting a state does not restrict the newspapers in this field, unfortunately.
- Select Year(s): You can restrict your results to a range of years; currently between 1777 and 1963 by choosing a "from" year followed by a "to" year.
- Date Range: You can restrict your results to a range of dates by choosing a "from" date followed by a "to" date.

- Limit Search: You can restrict your search to a specific page within the newspaper issue; for example, Front Pages, page 8s, etc. This is handy if you are looking for a specific section of a newspaper and it generally is on page 16, such as the Vitals Section for example.
- Language: You can restrict the newspapers searched by a specific language. Currently there are 19 languages available in the collection.
- Enter Search with any of the words: Similar to a Boolean "or", enter all of the words that you wish to search for. In this case, any occurrence of one or more of the words on a page will trigger a positive result.
- Enter Search with all of the words: Similar to a Boolean "and", enter all of the words that you wish to search for. In this case, all of the words must occur on a page in order for a positive result to be returned.
- Enter Search with the phrase: Similar to entering a phrase of more than one word encased in quotation marks. In this case, all of the words in the exact phrase must occur on a page in order for a positive result to be returned.
- Enter Search with the words within X words of each other: This is called a proximity search. In this case, you enter the words, and then select 5, 10, 50, or 100. This is handy if you are searching for more than one person, event, or subject, and also very useful when middle initials are used in people's names. For example, if you are searching for Franklin Roosevelt, a proximity search of 5 words would return pages with Franklin Delano Roosevelt or Franklin D. Roosevelt. A subject example is entering tax reform within 5 words. This would include results for any occurrence of tax reform, but also reform of income tax.

17 Tips for Using Google Search for Genealogy

Normally when people think of Google, they think of the search engine. As genealogy researchers, it is imperative that we learn to use the Google search engine effectively, since it can help us find ancestors, relevant documents, and many more pertinent things to help find our ancestors.

Using the Google Search Engine Effectively for Genealogy Research

- A basic search in Google requires us to enter a search criteria in the Search box. This can be something simple such as a full name or surname. Or a much more complicated entry. When using multiple words in the criteria it is assumed to be a Boolean AND. For example, Word1 Word2 Word3 as your search criteria means that all words must appear to provide a positive search result.
- If you are searching for a multi-word phrase that must appear as the phrase, simply, put double quotes before and after the phrase. For example, "Word1 Word2 Word3"
- If you wish to exclude a word from your search, simply put a minus sign before the word that you wish to exclude. For example, John Dulles –Foster
- Want to include synonyms in your search? Just place a tilde symbol in front of the word that you are looking for as a synonym. For example, Word1 ~Word2
- To search within a specific site, enter the word site: in front of the URL of the site. For example site:youtube.com
- To exclude results from a specific site because you have already searched it or it dominates the results and you don't wish to see results from that site, just put a minus sign in front of the site term. In our previous example where you want to exclude results from YouTube, just enter –site:youtube.com
- Use the OR operator if you wish to include multiple words or phrases in a search. For example Lincoln OR "Emancipation Proclamation"
- Although Google's searches with multiple words assume an AND operation, you can use the AND operator. This is useful when you have a more complicated criteria that has a combination of OR and AND operations in your search criteria.

- Wildcard searches can be performed by entering an asterisk (*) in your search criteria.
- To return to a prior version of a web page enter cache:xyz.com. It is different from the Internet Archive's Wayback Machine. Google presents just the most recent version of a web page, whereas the Wayback Machine presents multiple versions.
- To restrict results to specific filetypes, enter your criteria as follows: searchword filetype pdf
- To find results from related websites enter related:website1.com
- To find results for a search for a word within the title, enter intitle:cemetery
- To find results for multiple words that appear within the title, enter allintitle:cemetery burial
- To find results for a word (or text string) that appears in a URL, enter allinurl:textstring
- To perform a proximity search, i.e., finding words within a specified number of words from one another, use the AROUND function. For example, Word1 AROUND(5) Word2 finds occurrences where Word1 is within 5 words from Word2
- To restrict results to a range of years, enter [year1]..[year2] in your search criteria

How to Use the National Archives' Numident Files

What's a NUMIDENT you might ask? It is short for the Social Security Administration's Numerical Identification Files (NUMIDENT). There are three types of entries in NUMIDENT: death, application (SS-5), and claim records. For those who don't want to spend the money to obtain a copy of the SS-5 form, this database may have the info that you are looking for. The application is an excellent place to obtain the name of a person's father and mother, as well as birth date and place.

From the Numerical Identification (NUMIDENT) Files FAQs (you might want to read these before starting to search):

Overview

The death records contain information related to the applicant's death, including full name, social security number, date of birth, sex, and date of death. The death records do not include any State reported deaths in accordance with the Social Security Act section 205(r). There are 49,459,293 death record entries in the transfer of the 1936-2007 records.

The application (SS-5) records contain information extracted from the SS-5 form "Application for a Social Security Card" or "Application for Social Security Account Number." Information in the NUMIDENT application entries include applicant's full name, father's name, mother's maiden name, sex, race/ethnic description, place of birth, and other information about the application or subsequent changes to the applicant's record. The transfer of the 1936 - 2007 records include records for individuals with a verified death or who would have been 110 years old by December 31, 2007. There are a total of 72,182,729 application records for 40,873,455 social security numbers. For some social security numbers, there are multiple application records.

The claim records include information on whether it is a life-or-death claim, full name, date of birth, sex, father's name, mother's maiden name, and place of birth. The transfer of the 1936 - 2007 records include records for individuals with a verified death or who would have been 110 years old by December 31, 2007. There are a total of 25,230,486 claim records for 25,140,847 social security numbers. For some social security numbers, there are multiple claim records.

Limitations

The Application (SS-5) Files do not include records of all social security applications between 1936 and 2007.

- Between 1973 and 1979, the Social Security Administration converted legacy SS-5 records to the NUMIDENT electronic database. Information on applications prior to 1973 may be incomplete.
- There are only Application (SS-5) records for verified deceased individuals or those born prior to 1908.

The Death Files do not include records of all deaths between 1936 and 2007.

- In particular, the files do not include any state reported deaths in accordance with the Social Security Act section 205(r). An estimated 10% - 30% of reported deaths to the Social Security Administration are state reported deaths.
- The absence of a record for a person is not proof that the person is alive.
- The files do not include deaths for individuals who never received a social security number.
- The Social Security Administration began maintaining death information using automated (computer processing) methods in 1962. Information on deaths prior to 1962 may be incomplete or missing.

The Claim Files do not include records of all claims between 1936 and 2007.

- The Social Security Administration stopped creating the claim records by 1984.

There may be a record for an individual in one set of the files, but not in the others. For example, there may be a Death record, but no corresponding record in the Application and Claim Files.

- There are nearly 6 million social security numbers in the Application (SS-5) Files that do not appear in the Death Files.
- There are nearly 23 million social security numbers in the Claim Files that do not appear in the Application records.

What to remember while using the system

- It contains records for every social security number (SSN) assigned to individuals with a verified death or who would have been over 110 years old by December 31, 2007
- Coverage dates are 1936-2007
- Database searches are broken down by the first letter of the person's last name
- My parents' generation was well represented in the database (born early 1900s), but my grandparents generation (born 1800s) were not, even though they met the criteria.
- (Important) It is easy to get no results if you forget to go back to the beginning and forget to select the database that corresponds to your target person's last name (I forget to do this all the time)
- Some social security numbers, have multiple claim records for no apparent reason
