Monthly Raffle

This past month (May 15th through June 14th), I offered a raffle for all subscribers.

The winner of the raffle is unknown since I have not heard back from her/him. Their email address starts with th4un Congratulations! And please email me back so I can get you started with your prize

And what did he/she win?

Yes. A full year of Storied Ultimate—for free. Includes a full year of Storied, a full year of NewspaperArchive, and also the publication of your very own StoriedBook!

I have been a user of NewspaperArchive for over a decade, and have found hundreds of articles about my ancestors and relatives. I started using Storied over the last year to capture written stories, clippings, and photos of my ancestors (and myself). And I really like it. It is so easy.

So I wanted to share these tools, and with the cooperation of the folks at Storied we are doing this.

To get an idea of what the winner is receiving and the details of all the options, please go to STORIED

BUT—There is more!

ANCESTO

Next month's raffle will be for the same Storied Prize and will include Existing Subscribers as well as new subscribers

Free Genealogy Website of the Month - Google Databases for Genealogy

Google has several search engines and databases that are very useful for genealogy researchers. Here is an overview of some of these databases and functions.

Google Books has a seemingly never-ending supply of digitized books. And there is an ample number of old books that can be used in your genealogy research. Generally, there are two types of entries: books that are digitized and full text of the entire book is available online, and books where only partial sections or pages are available, and only snippets of your resultant search results provide useful information.

The URL is books.google.com

Google Patents presents a search engine to find old patents from around the world. Personally, I found that five of my ancestors held patents, much to my surprise, and several of them were from the 1800s!

The URL is patents.google.com

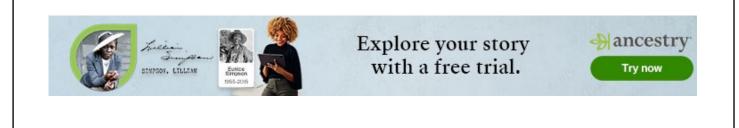

Google Cache provides the ability to see a previous version of a web page. This is particularly useful when you get a 404 Error or a "File Not Found" page when going to a website. Just enter "cache:" in front (do not enter the quotes) of the desired webpages URL, and it will take you to a previous version of the page.

Google Scholar provides a simple way to broadly search for scholarly literature. From one place, you can search across many disciplines and sources: articles, theses, books, abstracts, and court opinions, from academic publishers, professional societies, online repositories, universities, and other web sites.

The URL is scholar.google.com

Google Images has over 28 billion images in its database. Similar search functions as in generic Google Search are available. There also is a reverse image search. This is particularly useful for genealogists as it may find other researchers who have the same or similar photo as that of your ancestor that you are performing the reverse image search for or even an image base somewhere with pertinent photos. This can also be used to find larger or better quality versions of the same image.

The URL is images.google.com

Free Genealogy Website of the Month - Google Databases for Genealogy

Google Maps and Google Earth are particularly useful for genealogists as we can see visually what a house, business, or other property looks like. Also creating custom maps of our ancestors' residences can also provide us with genealogical clues.

The URLs are www.google.com/maps and earth.google.com/web

Google Translate is very useful when attempting to convert written documents, letters, or other material from the language of the "old country" to current language. There are over 100 languages available.

The URL is translate.google.com

Google Alerts is an excellent resource for genealogy researchers. It is like having a constant search running all the time. It won't necessarily search inside databases or their records, but if a mention of a person, surname, or whatever else you set the Alert up for occurs in a new resource or news article, you will be sent an email. It can be your secret weapon!

The URL is www.google.com/alerts

Google News Archive provides search and browsing capabilities for over 2,300 newspaper titles, primarily from the U.S. and Canada. It is no longer updated as of several years ago. The search capability can be hit and miss for older newspapers published prior to 1970, but it is worth the effort.

The URL is https://news.google.com/newspapers

Google Search is the ubiquitous search engine that we all use, have used, or are familiar with. There are several tricks to optimize one's results, especially when searching for ancestors. A description of 20 different Google search techniques can be found at Mastering Google Search for Genealogy

Newspaper Research Tip of the Month - 4 Big Challenges in Downloading Historical Newspaper Articles

I have been researching online historical newspaper sites for several years, both the free ones as well as the subscription-based sites. Their software capabilities, independent of the size and quality of their scanned collections, break down into two parts:

- 1. How do you search the site and find "stuff"
- 2. How do you download and save the articles that you find

This post is all about the second part - how do you download and save materials.

If you remember only ONE thing about this Research Tip it is this:

"Make sure you plan ahead before you download an article."

Many of these sites use different underlying base software and they all are quite different in their approach to providing a download capability.

Among the varying features that I have found will require you to do one or a combination of the items below:

- Download a .pdf of the page that contains your desired article
- Download a .jpg of the page that contains your desired article
- Use a software snipping tool such as the Windows "Snipping Tool" or some commercial offerings, such as Snaglt, Shutter, Jing, etc. There are many of these tools. So you just snip the article with this tool.
- The newspaper library software will snip the article for you and present it as a "whole" article.
- The newspaper library software will snip the article for you and present it in several pieces that comprise the entire article, such as the headline, and each paragraph as an independent .jpg file

The concern with all of these methods is

THE ANCESTOR HU

"How do you end up with a complete article that is large enough to read or is zoomable?"

"Zoomability" is one of the biggest complaints that I hear from my fellow online historical newspaper researchers after they download an article.

The 4 challenges regarding downloading an article and ending up with what you want and need are presented below

Highlights – almost every online site presents the selected article after a search with highlighted search terms.

So, depending on the capabilities provided by the site software, make sure that if you do NOT want to download the article with the highlighted text, that you download the article the way that you want it. There is always a way to get the article without the highlights. Experiment with the software or just download the whole page and crop your article later.

Chopped Up Articles – A few of the sites will present the article in a "chopped up" format, depending on the length of the article. Usually the title or headline is separated from the text, and if it is a long article, there may be several parts.

So just like your need to concern yourself with downloading highlighted text, you will need to be careful with downloading articles that are broken up. It is safest to download the article (or entire page) in .pdf format and crop to your liking later. With .pdf formats you can generally zoom to the size you desire and then crop or snip the article in one piece.

The Article is Too Small – this is the challenge that requires the most forethought when saving the article for later use. Much of the time, the repository software will allow you to download or snip articles in several different ways. Unfortunately, if you do not check your downloaded image before you leave the site, you might be disappointed in the size or the quality of said download. Make sure that it is either zoomable after the download or if not, that the article is zoomed to a readable size prior to downloading. Also, if it is too small when downloaded, depending on how the site prepares the clipping, zooming later may degrade the quality so that when zoomed, it is so fuzzy that you can't read it.

Just like the other challenges, forethought will lead to the best results. It is always safest to download the article (or entire page) in .pdf format and crop to your liking later.

Oops, I Forgot the Citation – This is easily the biggest mistake one can make and creates many "smack your head" moments. When I first started searching newspapers, I got so excited when I found an interesting article that I just downloaded the article and did not record the details about the newspaper that I found it in. In order for me to find the article again for those that I discovered online – I will have to perform all those searches again. Many of the repositories have a function or a link where the source details are presented. What I do is include the publication title, publication date and page number as part of the file name of the downloaded .pdf or image file.

The moral of the story is that online newspaper collections can be an incredibly valuable tool for your research. Fortunately, much of what is written above and the challenges presented are not huge to overcome. Just think ahead and make sure that the articles that you download are readable and in a format and size that pleases you and your future readers. And make sure you document where the articles came from!

The easiest way is to save the entire page as a pdf and include the citation info in the file name.

16 Places Where You Can Find Genealogy and Family History Books

One resource that should be used more by family history researchers are books. There are hundreds of thousands of local history, family history, and genealogy books that have been published. A large percentage have been digitized, and even more are on library shelves and can be borrowed - either from a local library, a university library, or a genealogical or historical society library. Many can be made available via inter-library loan as well. And even more are made available by subscription genealogy databases.

Free Online Genealogy and History Books

- The Digital Public Library of America—a free national digital library with online contents from over 4,000 libraries.
- FamilySearch Digital Library—over 500,000 books and other digitized items are available online.
- Google Books has over 10 million titles available. There are two basic types—books that have been digitized and all pages are available to view; and titles where only a snippet preview is available.
- Hathitrust is a collaboration between academic and research libraries. It has over 17 million digitized items. There are two types of results—"Full View" and "Limited (search only)"
- HeritageQuest Online—available only via libraries; a library card is required to use this resource. It has a sizable book collection of family histories, plus a number of varying categories of genealogy records. A detailed description of its contents can be found HERE
- The Internet Archive—similar to the collections above, the Archive has over 20 million books and texts available. It also has a sizable number that can be borrowed for a short time.

Subscription Required Sources of Genealogy Books

- American Ancestors—the Research Library has a sizable collection of Local History and Family History Books.
- Ancestry—the Stories, Memories, and Histories section has over 23,000 entries.
- FindMyPast—has a section of their database entitled "Directories and Social History" that contains a number of different types of publications, including directories, family histories, almanacs and social history.
- MyHeritage—available are books and publications; biographies, family histories, and local and general history publications. Also available is a Compilation of Published Sources

Library Sources of Genealogy Books

- Genealogy Libraries—specialty libraries, such as the Allen County Public Library Genealogy Center in Fort Wayne, Indiana.
 Over 100,000 books are available on the Allen County Library Page on the Internet Archive, for example.
- Genealogical and Historical Societies—local, county, and state societies all have a library full of books, many of course pertaining to the local area.
- College and University Libraries—collections relating to the local area as well as the state are worth looking in to.
- WorldCat—in essence, connects thousands of libraries catalogs together in one searchable database.
- Interlibrary Loan—most libraries have an Interlibrary Loan Program, where you can borrow the book from a distant library for a short time.

Curated County Histories

 Empty Branches on the Family Tree—has a curated a list of free, out-of-copyright books about local and state histories. These links will save you a lot of time searching many different collections and databases.

Laying out your ancestors' important events in a visual way is a great way to analyze their lives and compare them to others in your family tree.

Personally, I like using timeline software applications as a way to display these events for some branches of my family tree. If you like, it is a visual way to share important events with your own relatives about their ancestors.

I have used many different timeline tools and for me, the one that is the easiest to use and has the most flexibility for the future is Timeline JS from Northwestern University.

Most timeline software tools are either an app, a software program that you download, or a web application. These are terrific and often have a wide variety of features that Timeline JS does not have.

Why do I recommend Timeline JS? Because it is Open Source and not a proprietary program. Other timeline tools may have more features but are susceptible to the underlying software that they rely on. For example, many used to use Flash technology which created problems on smartphones. My first timeline software was proprietary. They went out of business and the software was not usable after a short time. So I had to start over.

On the next page is a sample from my own tree. It is fairly simple but does have text, photos and videos included. Not multi-color like many timeline "makers" but does the job. Scroll through and see its display and features.

Timeline Easy-to-make, beautiful timelines.

So, is Timeline JS the coolest timeline creator out there? Nope – it is pretty basic. But it is really easy to implement and gets the job done. As stated earlier, being open-source protects it somewhat in the future.

Try it out – you might like it. If you still want something "fancy-schmancy" you won't have invested a ton of time with Timeline JS.

And, it is FREE!

I'm still using Timeline JS after almost 10 years!

I am not promoting any of these timeline software packages, but they might be worth a look if you want to invest a few $$$

Using the New Chronicling America Version 2.0 – It is Different and It Is Better

This webinar discusses and demonstrates the new Version 2.0 of Chronicling America (CA). The most recent version of Chronicling America has been in use since 2011. This new version being deployed this year has some exciting new features that will make your search experience more beneficial and more enjoyable.

Here are the highlights;

There are three parts to CA. This webinar features how to use all of the three:

- Collection Items Where you can perform a Basic and Advanced Search
- All Digitized Titles Where you can discover which Newspaper Titles and Date Ranges are available in the CA Database
- Directory of U.S. Newspapers in American Libraries Where you can discover where non-digitized titles are held

Some of the new features include results filtering, auto fill-in of counties, cities, titles, and ethnicities after selecting a state, and several more.

The majority of the session will be demonstrations on how to use these new features as well as how to navigate the new software.

Please go to the Webinars page to get detailed info and register.

How to Develop Online Newspaper Research Skills

This webinar is intended to build newspaper research skills for genealogy and history researchers. Online newspaper research can be a frustrating endeavor for several reasons. The goal is for the audience to understand why it can be difficult and to learn some skills that will drastically improve search results. There are four sections in the webinar:

- Why search old newspapers?
- The challenges in searching old newspapers online
- 7 critical skills and techniques to successfully search newspapers online
- A detailed demonstration of these skills and techniques

Please go to the Webinars page to get detailed info and register.

I have been doing these newspaper research webinars for genealogy societies for a couple of years. I have just invested in the mechanisms to make them available virtually (live) for individuals. I still schedule genealogical societies and other institutions for group webinars.

Upcoming webinars in the next few months:

- 75 Techniques to Research Historic Newspapers A to Z
- How to Find and Analyze More Newspaper Obituaries
- Find Hidden Vital Records in Newspapers
- A 3 Hour Master Class in Online Newspaper Research

Evidence Explained - 4th Edition

NOW AVAILABLE AS eBook ALSO! Evidence Explained 4th Edition Citing History Sources from Artifacts to Cyberspace

Elizabeth Shown Mill's renowned book "Evidence Explained" is now available in its updated 4th Edition.

In the six years since the last edition was published, changes at major repositories and online information providers–as well as the ever-evolving electronic world–have generated new citation and analysis challenges for researchers. As a consequence, Mrs. Mills has once again updated her citation models and added descriptions and evaluations of numerous contemporary materials not included in the Third Edition Revised.

Evidence Explained's new fourth edition significantly reexamines historical resources and simplifies long-standing practices.

Highlights of the Fourth Edition include:

FANCESTO

- Updated Chapters One and Two ("Fundamentals of Analysis" and "Fundamentals of Citation"), continue to lay the foundations for successful research.
- An entirely new Chapter Three, "Building a Citation," provides a tutorial for the construction of citations. Here, you learn to work with seven basic building blocks that can be mixed and matched to create a citation for any kind of source.
- Chapter Three's 14 streamlined templates replace the previous 170 QuickChek Models, assembling the basic building blocks as needed to create citations for every type of material—whether accessed as an unpublished manuscript, print publication, database, or online image delivered at a specific URL or through a complex path and its waypoints.
- All examples in the twelve "Records" chapters (Chapters Four through Fifteen) are keyed to the specific templates that work best for each source or situation.
- Hundreds of new citation examples emphasize modern modes of access, particularly the layered citations that modern media require.

The By Location Page

The easiest way to access a particular state's or province's list of collections and categories is via the BY LOCATION page.

This page has a dropdown for each state or province, with a link to the online collections links for every category available.

Place Finders

Do you often find yourself wanting or needing to know what county a city is located in or what places might be found in a specific county?

You could do a Google search but what if you had a handy list that included a list of all the cities, other places, and ghost towns that identified their corresponding county along with a list of the counties in a state that listed all of the places in that county?

What is a place? Besides cities and towns, you will find that the names of other places may vary from state to state. Most states have Census Designated Places, Unincorporated communities, Indian Reservations, and ghost towns. Other places may be known as villages, hamlets, historic districts, townships, boroughs, municipalities, and more.

Each state has a list of all the places in the state and their corresponding county. Each place has a link to a page that includes information about that place. The page may include geographical information, historical information, current information about the place and its surroundings, and much more.

Included also for each state, is a Downloadable PDF with two lists: A list of places and their corresponding county, and; A list of counties with the places that are in that county.

Juneteenth

Want to know more about Juneteenth? The National Museum of African American History & Culture has put together a Juneteenth Digital Toolkit It has an amazing amount of information and should be read by all.

Honoring Enslaved Ancestors and How to Find Them

This article is reprinted with permission from Storied/NewspaperARCHIVE

Juneteenth, also known as Freedom Day or Emancipation Day, is a significant holiday celebrated on June 19th each year. It commemorates the emancipation of enslaved African Americans in the United States. On June 19, 1865, Union General Gordon Granger arrived in Galveston, Texas, and issued General Order No. 3, officially proclaiming the end of slavery in Texas, over two years after the Emancipation Proclamation was signed. Juneteenth serves as a symbolic milestone in the ongoing struggle for freedom and equality. It is a time to reflect on the hardships endured by enslaved individuals and to celebrate their resilience, cultural heritage, and contributions to American society.

While attending the National Genealogical Society's annual conference in Richmond, Virginia, earlier this month, I managed to take a break from our Storied booth to sit in on several sessions. One of my favorites was "Researching Enslaved Persons in Virginia Records" by Melanie McComb, one of the genealogists at the New England Historic Genealogical Society and American Ancestors. It got me thinking about how to utilize NewspaperArchive. While finding detailed information about enslaved ancestors can be challenging due to the nature of slavery and limited records, using newspapers to search for enslaved ancestors can be a valuable resource in your genealogical research.

Here are some tips to help you navigate newspapers effectively:

1. Be Mindful of Historical Context: Recognize the inherent biases and dehumanizing language prevalent in newspapers of the time. Approach the information with sensitivity and critical analysis, understanding the social and cultural climate of the era.

2. Research Relevant Newspaper Collections: Identify publications from the geographic area where your ancestors were enslaved. Look for publications that cover the time period when slavery existed. NewspaperArchive has more than 2,500 publications from 1736-1866.

3. Utilize Advanced Search Options: Take advantage of advanced search features such as keyword search, date range filters, and the ability to search within specific newspapers or regions. The NewspaperArchive collection includes more than 500 newspapers from southern states prior to 1867.

4. Employ Specific Keywords: Use keywords related to slavery, such as "slave," "enslaved," "slavery," "plantation," "negro," or "runaway slave." Combine these keywords with names, locations, or other relevant details to narrow down your search.

Honoring Enslaved Ancestors and How to Find Them

5. Explore Classified Ads and Notices: Pay attention to classified advertisements, estate sales, probate notices, or runaway slave ads. These may provide information about enslaved individuals, such as names, physical descriptions, skills, or rewards offered for their capture.

6. Investigate Local News and Events: Look for local news articles, social events, or community happenings that may mention enslaved individuals. This can include reports on slave auctions, emancipation events, court cases, or criminal proceedings involving enslaved individuals.

7. Analyze Community News and Church Announcements: Check community news sections, church announcements, or newsletters that may contain information about enslaved individuals, such as births, marriages, deaths, or membership records.

8. Consider Alternative Terminology: Be aware that newspapers of the time may have used alternative terminology or euphemisms to refer to enslaved individuals. Familiarize yourself with terms like "servants," "property," "negro," or "colored" that may appear in newspaper articles.

Trying to find information about enslaved ancestors is no easy task, but with persistence and these tips to guide you, you never know what you might discover.

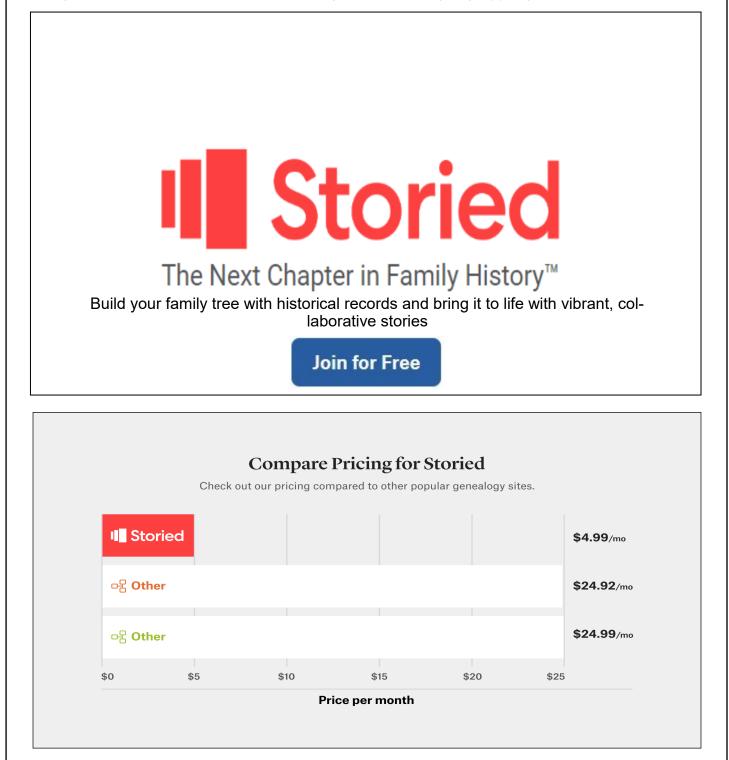

Help Your Ancestors Live Forever - Write Your Family History And Write Your Own History While You're At It

One of my goals in my personal genealogy is to make sure that my ancestors are remembered. Many had no descendants, so absolutely no one alive remembers them. That's sad to me, which is why I created a couple of family history websites. But recently I have been seeking even better ways to memorialize their lives. Their stories are important to be documented, which might explain why I am such a fan of newspaper research.

In any case, here is my favorite tool that I have discovered that provide a unique means to memorialize our ancestors.

And guess what? We need to produce our own autobiographies. We aren't getting any younger and memories do fade.
